Contents

Preface ........................................................................................................................ 7

Denis McQuail
Introduction: Reflections on Media Policy in Europe.................................................9

Mario Hirsch and Vibeke G. Petersen
Enlargement of the Arena: European Media Policy..................................................12

Denis McQuail
Revisiting Diversity as a Media Policy Goal ............................................................41

Jeremy Tunstall
Cultural and Media Nationalism in Europe ...............................................................59

Werner A. Meier
National and Transnational Media Ownership Concentration in Europe:
A Burden for Democracy? ......................................................................................75

Kees Brants
Changing Media, Changing Journalism.................................................................105

Josef Trappel
Towards the Upper Limit:
Structure and Policy of Emerging Online Media in Europe ................................123
Els De Bens
Developments and Opportunities of the European Press Industry.........................141

Rosario de Mateo and Laura Bergés
Fat Cats: Private Commercial Television in Europe.............................................171

Olof Hultén
Between Vanishing Concept and Future Model:
Public Service Broadcasting in Europe on the Move........................................197

Hans Kleinsteuber
A Difficult Road: The Diffusion of Digital Radio and Television in Europe...........223

Bernt Østergaard
Much More to Come: Features of Mobile Content in Europe..............................239

About the Authors................................................................................................255